Confusion Between the Terms: Internet and Web

Many people use the terms Internet and World Wide Web (a.k.a. the Web) interchangeably, but in fact, the two terms are not synonymous.

The Internet and the Web are two separate but related things. They are both very different.

So, the first thing to do is clear up the uncertainty between the two words.

The Internet

The Internet is a massive network of networks or a networking infrastructure. It connects millions of computers globally, forming a network in which any computer can communicate with any other computer as long as they are both connected to the Internet.

Information that travels over the Internet does so via a set of rules known as protocols.

The Web (World Wide Web)

The World Wide Web, or simply the Web, is a way of accessing information through the medium of the Internet. It is an information-sharing model that is built on top of the Internet. The Web uses the HTTP protocol, one of the languages spoken over the Internet, to transmit data.
